CAREER PROSPECTS

Studying law prepares you for a rewarding career no matter what path you choose. We equip our students with legal and problem-solving knowledge, communication, analytical skills and practical experience needed to thrive in the job market. This legislative knowledge will give you access to great opportunities in many fields.

DEAN'S MESSAGE

In my experience, all law students must hone their craft in three areas – The first is the skillset comprised of critical observation, problem-solving and effective representation. The second is having the ethical credence to resolve ethical dilemmas. The third, and the most effective, is social empathy which enables a lawyer to empathize with the community.

We, as Faculty of Law (FOL) at University of Central Punjab (UCP), ensures that our students attain these essential qualities by the time they graduate. FOL has devised a critical-clinical learning model. We have implemented John Dewey's model of experiential learning with a few modifications in our regular classrooms. Contrary to one-way teacher-learner practice, we have made learning a two-way process for our teachers and students. We provide the students with the opportunity to observe, experience and learn the concepts of law and apply them in real-time. We help our students develop the core skills required to persuade courts. The students are rigorously taught how to develop and present an argument effectively. Therefore, the Faculty of Law at UCP is one of the leading law institutions in Pakistan that has a well-developed teaching methodology, aligned with contemporary international trends.

We place a special emphasis on the ethical training of students. To achieve this, FOL utilizes three platforms; firstly, we engage students in arguments over multiple ethical dilemmas in the form of hypotheticals. Secondly, we invite distinguished professionals to conduct interactive sessions on ethical dilemmas with our students. Third, we give the students in-class projects focusing on the different dilemmas of society. We then ask them to prepare reports based on the data they collect. The faculty has also launched an on-campus law clinic. The law clinic works in three areas:

1. It offers free legal advice and provides help not only to the UCP family but also to the community in general
2. It gives opportunities to students by conducting training focused on practical skills like mooting, mock trials, mini-trials, etc.
3. It focuses on the students' critical and analytical thinking skills enabling them to carry out quality research. Our Law Research Journal is in the process to publish the research conducted by our students and faculty

We have a strong belief in our students' potential, and continually strive to flicker the flame of empathy, ethics, compassion and competence in their hearts.

FACILITIES

• MOOT COURTS

The importance of clinical legal education is essential for developing our students' skillset. Thus, we incorporate cross-curriculum advocacy in our teaching methodologies. Clinical legal education extends students' learning beyond the classroom. Students attain interpersonal, analytical and advocacy skills to form their professional identity. We have two fully equipped courtrooms, the Khadim Hussain Moot Courtroom and the UCP Moot Courtroom, in which students learn through simulated court proceedings.

• LAW CLINIC

The Law Clinic Program at UCP Faculty of Law bears a two-fold responsibility. It provides pro bono legal services to the underprivileged community members and a hands-on learning experience for students. To facilitate this, FOL maintains an excellent infrastructure that comprises of a Law Clinic Office, a Law Clinic Secretary Office, and a Conference Room. This year, Law Clinic integrated the clinical method of education with students' regular classes by organizing training sessions on law moots, mock trials, debates and research writing.

• PEACE AND MEDIATION CENTERS

The Peace Centre of FOL was established to promote the ideology of peace. It addresses the topic through both academic courses and practical application. It also researches issues of peace at personal, national and global levels. It aims to provide academic and research opportunities for students who are interested in peace and conflict studies or related fields. To offer an enhanced and diverse learning experience, the Center intends to implement its academic and research plans through creating a liaison with other organizations working for peace and humanity. An important component of the FOL Peace Center is our on-campus Meditation Center, which provides a platform for pro bono services in negotiation, mediation and arbitration, etc.

• LIBRARY

The University of Central Punjab has a fully-equipped library on campus to fulfill the study and research needs of its students and faculty members. The library stocks over 46,000 books which include more than 11,000 law books. Moreover, the Higher Education Commission has given our campus access to 12,000 online full-text journals, international, databases and other material published online worldwide. These invaluable research materials can be accessed by our students off-campus as well.
